

HOW TO ORDER JULIAN'S BOOK AND HOW TO GET IT OUT

The postage varies so much because of the variables e.g. rural or urban, book numbers by weight, size of the box, South Island and North Island.

I suggest you just order the book and pay for them and we'll let you know the postage amount after they are posted. At the back of the book it says they are $1.50. This is a mistake. It ought to be, and is, $2. The boxes next to each of the 7 steps below is for you to tick to make sure you have done them all :) Thanks

How To Order - Seven Steps. Send me an email with the following information.

1. Tell us the number of books you want @ $2 per book.
2. Let us know the address you want the books shipped to.
3. Tell us your phone number.
4. Deposit the funds into this account: 12-3232-0016590-00
5. Be sure to reference your deposit with your first name and last name.
6. Once we see the deposit has arrived, we'll ship the books to you
7. Tell us the name of streets you are going to deliver to.
 - The reason we ask for this is twofold. We are keeping a record of what streets in New Zealand have been 'done' so that we don't have double ups. If you are just distributing to friends and family or people you meet, that's good. They will tell you if they already have a copy. Some people keep a supply in their car ready to give away to people they meet as they go about their day.
 - We can tell if someone in a street in which you made a deliver has gone and done likewise. In other words, if someone you have gave a book to was so impacted, they too have taken up the cause and ordered books.

Send the information in points 1-7 above via email to julian@stopcogov.kiwi

Once again, thank you for being a faithful, pro-active Kiwi! We need more like you. If you can encourage your friends to do the same, that would be incredible.

Keep In Mind The Reason You Are Doing This

The government, through the main stream media, has been brainwashing the population of New Zealand for the past decade. They have ramped up their campaign over the past 5 years, pushing a false narrative about the Treaty of Waitangi, white privilege, the negative effects of colonialism, Maori disadvantage, racism towards Maori, Maori had all their land stolen by settlers, the British in New Zealand's history were harsh and brutal with Maori, that 'the system' is set up for white people and designed to push Maori down, and much more.

The overall impression they want you to get is that New Zealand was stolen from Maori, a great and terrible injustice has occurred, and it's only right and proper to give New Zealand back to Maori.

You will be will aware of this.

Currently, New Zealand is marinating in lies and false information.

The government has targeted the entire population, but particularly the under 30s. They want them to be supportive of the Maori takeover of New Zealand, or at the very least not oppose it.

Consequently, a whole generation of young people has been sucked in, and they have drunk in the lies down to the dregs.

I have likened what has happened to the formation of a religious cult, with the under 30s signing up to become members, joining the Maori religious community. The Maori cause, so called, has given many young people a purpose in life, which is the main reason people join a cult.

So we must launch a counter offensive. New Zealand must be detoxed. The population must be de-programmed. We must be like psychologists, 'treating' cult members, helping them to come out of the cult. Gloriavale comes to mind.

They is a reason that the vast majority of over 50s in the country have seen through all this - they have gained wisdom, they remember what New Zealand used to be like, and can make comparisons with what it is like now, and their skills in discernment are highly tuned. Hence, they are the group leading the counter offensive.

In comparison, the under 30s, generally speaking, and with rare exceptions, and not wise, not discerning, gullible, naive, and easily led. They don't know what New Zealand used to be like in the 60s and 70s when this country was an amazing place, so they can't make comparisons.

With all this in mind, here are some suggestions. Don't give a copy to everyone. Be discerning. Try to focus on leaders. In this way, you won't waste books.

1. Google the names of business leaders, city councilors, school principals, church leaders in your town and city. Find out their addresses. Post them a copy of the book.
2. Go into retirement villages. Ask you can talk to the residents as a group about co-governance. Hand out the books at the end. Best of all, they might already have a data projector and screen. If so, I will give you one of my power point shows to use, so all the work is done for you.
3. Sit down and list all your friends and family. Post a copy to them.
4. Walk around your town, and go from business to business. Talk to the managers of businesses. Give them a copy.
5. Whoever you give a copy to ALWAYS make a point of asking them to read the book, and if they think it's helpful, to purchase their own copies, and to join in the counter offensive. This is what R.I.D is all about.
6. There will be many many others creative ways to get the books out. Brainstorm. It never fails to amaze me how creative and clever Kiwis can be when it comes to solving problems, and coming up with brilliant solutions.

Read, Invest, Distribute.

Let me tell you about someone called Sonia (right)
I think she is a modern day heroine.

Sonia wrote to me saying the following: "I think it is important to get to the older people who are not on the Internet or on Smart Phones. The reason is that when I talk to the people in my Retirement Village, they all say the same:

“I know what is going on, I watch 1 News every night and I read the Herald.”

I try to explain that the journalists have been muzzled, but they do not believe me, and shut down the conversation. So I think it is important, to get your book out, to all Retirement Villages. These old people are also the ones who nearly always go out to vote. Retirement Villages are large these days and it is a captive audience. They talk amongst themselves and would pass the information on to their families, which would hit a wider audience.”

Thank you so much Sonia. You are such an inspiration.

All roads lead to the rally with 100,000 people in the Auckland Domain just prior to the election.

We need absolutely every Kiwi to be active now. Time is ticking.

Yours in the fight for our country
